Serving as Interim Director during the past year while Professor Sun Joo Kim has been on sabbatical leave has reminded me once again of how much the Institute and Korean studies at Harvard have grown. I still remember an anxious moment back in the 1990s following tenure and Professor Edward Wagner’s subsequent retirement, when the Institute was still struggling simply to exist independently of the Fairbank Center for East Asian Studies (now Fairbank Center of Chinese Studies), where it had been originally lodged, and I was the only ladder Korean studies professor on the faculty. Today Korean studies is thriving at Harvard, with faculty in premodern and modern history, literature, sociology, and anthropology, as well as Korean language. Last year (2018) Professor Nicholas Harkness (anthropology) was promoted to full professor with tenure, and in June 2019, Professor Si Nae Park (Korean literature) was also promoted to associate professor. Our Korean language program under the able and creative leadership of Director Hi-Sun Kim is seeing record numbers of students taking classes at all levels both in Cambridge and in our Harvard Summer School Program in Seoul, which we have been running jointly with Ewha Womans University since 2006. In fact, students enrolled in Korea-related courses across the board have been at historic highs in recent years, in some cases so high that courses have had to hold lotteries to be manageable.

There are many reasons for this surge of interest in Korea, but one of them is certainly a global fascination with K-pop in all its various dimensions, including film, which brings students into our courses not only from Korea but from almost every corner of the world. In fact, in my General Education course on modern Korea, “The Two Koreas,” which attracts about 200 students each time it is offered, we have students of widely differing ethnicities from many countries in Asia, Europe, and Latin America, as well as from North America. In response to this burgeoning student interest, and to complement its outstanding existing faculty in Chinese and Japanese film and media studies, the Department of East Asian Languages and Civilizations (EALC), with the enthusiastic support of the Institute, recently opened a faculty search in Korean humanities, with an emphasis on film and media, and we are all looking forward to seeing that position filled in the near future. In the meantime, the Institute has also been active in helping to launch and support new courses on Korean film, and building, together with the Harvard Film Archive (HFA) and the South Korean media giant CJ Entertainment, an extensive archive of Korean films. The Institute has also been jointly sponsoring with the HFA regular events related to Korean cinema, including film retrospectives and public discussions with visiting Korean film directors. Just last March, for example, we welcomed famous director Park Chan-wook, whose films include JSA, Old Boy, and The Handmaiden, among others. Park not only talked about his work at a joint HFA-Institute forum, but also made himself available to students in a new class called “Frames in Time: Korean Film as History and Filmmaking,” developed this past academic year with the support of the Institute and taught by Professor Alex Zahlten and myself, along with Becky Bae, one of a growing number of graduate students in EALC who are writing their dissertations on Korean film history.

As the Institute moves towards its 40th Anniversary in 2021, we have much to celebrate, but also much to do. Ironically, hard-won success to date has brought new and even greater challenges. As faculty and students in the Korean studies program have dramatically increased, we find ourselves scrambling for ways and means to support and sustain that growth by expanding the number and size of our faculty and student grants for research and study. Going forward, the Institute is also intent on promoting the development of Korean studies at Harvard in completely new areas. The Harvard University Museums have one of the finest university collections of Korean art in the world, including a comprehensive working collection of Korean ceramics from the 7th century (Unified Silla) to the late 19th century (Chosön), but we have no faculty or program in Korean art. Both historical and contemporary Korea are natural and fascinating sites to explore current theories, debates, and issues in political science and international relations, but we have no permanent Korean faculty or program in the Government Department or in the Kennedy School. Questions of ethnicity and migration loom before us as Americans and global citizens, but we have no dedicated faculty or program at Harvard that explores Korean-American history and experience in all its richness and complexity.

There are other areas at Harvard where we hope to establish a Korean presence as well, but I hope the point is made. We have much to do, and that “much to do” is incredibly exciting. I thank everyone engaged with the Institute, faculty, students, associates, visitors, and not least of all our extraordinarily talented and devoted staff, for making my past year as Interim Director so productive and personally enjoyable. And on behalf of the Institute, I also want to thank our generous donors, large and small, who have stood with us over the years, this year included, and helped provide the means for us to grow. We look forward to continuing to work with you all as our 40th year approaches and we embark on a major new expansion of the Institute and Korean studies at Harvard.

The Korea Institute was established in 1981 under the aegis of the Fairbank Center for East Asian Research, and in 1993 it became an autonomous institution directly responsible to the Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences. It is the only organization devoted solely to the support and development of Korean studies at Harvard, as the central hub for Harvard faculty, students, leading scholars in the field, and visitors to join together as a community for the study of Korea.

The Korea Institute is an integral and dynamic part of intellectual life at Harvard. In addition to the Korea Colloquium, the Institute also supports lectures, workshops, conferences, and other scholarly exchanges throughout the year. The Institute hosts visiting scholars, fellows, and associates through an affiliated scholars program. Other activities include faculty research projects, undergraduate and graduate student support, teaching, study- and work-in-Korea programs, publications, Korean film screenings, and some cultural events.

The Institute has also established a network of relationships with other centers and departments throughout the University and with colleagues and institutions throughout North America, Europe, and Asia.

Both series are produced by the Asia Center Publications Office and distributed by Harvard University Press.

HARVARD EAST ASIAN MONOGRAPHS 416

The Korean Buddhist Empire: A Transnational History, 1910–1945
Hwansoo Ilmee Kim
Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Asia Center, 2018

About the Book: “In the first part of the twentieth century, Korean Buddhists, despite living under colonial rule, reconfigured sacred objects, festivals, urban temples, propagation—and even their own identities—to modernize and elevate Korean Buddhism. By focusing on six case studies, this book highlights the centrality of transnational relationships in the transformation of colonial Korean Buddhism.

Hwansoo Ilmee Kim examines how Korean, Japanese, and other Buddhists operating in colonial Korea, Japan, China, Taiwan, Manchuria, and beyond participated in and were significantly influenced by transnational forces, even as Buddhists of Korea and other parts of Asia were motivated by nationalist and sectarian interests. More broadly, the cases explored in The Korean Buddhist Empire reveal that, while Japanese Buddhism exerted the most influence, Korean Buddhism was (as Japanese Buddhism was itself) deeply influenced by developments in China, Taiwan, Sri Lanka, Europe, and the United States, as well as by Christianity.” - Harvard University Press

North Korea: Peace? Nuclear War?
Editor: William H. Overholt
Cambridge, MA: The Mossavar-Rahmani Center for Business & Government, 2019

About the Book: “The North Korean nuclear crisis presents the contemporary world’s greatest risk, not just of major war but most importantly of nuclear war. Despite its importance the crisis is being managed in a treacherous context of public ignorance and misinformation. Most Americans could not locate Korea on a map. This volume assembles the work of leading experts in the hope of dispelling the misinformation and lack of information. Every author in this volume writes from career-long study of Korea and personal experience in Korea.

Chapters include a broad-ranging Overview; Countering North Korea’s Carrot-and-Stick Strategy; Why These Negotiations with North Korea Could Work, What Makes Kim Jong Un Different?, Development Strategies Available to North Korea and Their Political Risks; The new leader, the new economic model; Can Moon Jae In hold it together domestically?; Thinking realistically about unification; China’s Policy toward North Korea; Japan’s View of Nuclear North Korea: What Could Possibly Go Wrong?, Alliance Management and Tension: Between “Fire and Fury” and Protecting Alliance Equities, The Role of Sanctions; The History & meaning of denuclearization; The vexations of verification; Could the Trump Administration achieve a breakthrough?, Missed Opportunities: Years of Suspicion, Brief Viable Trust, Hope and History.” - Harvard Kennedy School Mossavar-Rahmani Center for Business & Government website

The Korea Colloquium is the KI’s flagship seminar series on Korea-related topics, which has gathered scholars in a variety of fields from far and wide over two decades. These lectures cover a range of topics, including, but not limited to, literature, history, anthropology, etc. Co-sponsorship by other Harvard centers and departments is welcome. These collaborations broaden perspectives on Korea and the United States, Asia, and Latin America, for example, and enrich our understanding of the scope of Korea studies while strengthening ties with colleagues in other regions. Professor Sun Joo Kim is the faculty organizer for the Korea Colloquium. The Korea Colloquium is funded by the Min Young-Chul Memorial Fund at the Korea Institute, Harvard University. The Korea Colloquium seminar series takes place on Thursdays at the Thomas Chan-Soo Kang Room (S050) in the CGIS South Building, 1730 Cambridge Street.

KIM KOO FORUM ON KOREA CURRENT AFFAIRS

The Kim Koo Forum on Korea Current Affairs was established in academic year 2004-2005 with the generous support of the Kim Koo Foundation. The Kim Koo Forum aims to supplement and enhance Harvard's existing Korean studies program by inviting experts in both academic and policy circles in the fields of diplomacy, security, cultural relations, and human rights to address some of the pressing issues facing the U.S. and the two Koreas today. The Kim Koo Forum on Korea Current Affairs frequently collaborates with other schools, departments, and centers across Harvard to bring speakers on a wide range of current affairs topics related to Korea. The Kim Koo Forum on Korea Current Affairs seminar series takes place on Thursdays at the Thomas Chan-Soo Kang Room (S050) in the CGIS South Building, 1730 Cambridge Street.

KOREA INSTITUTE SUMMER UNDERGRADUATE RESEARCH TRAVEL GRANTS
Korea Institute Undergraduate Summer Travel Grants are awarded to Harvard undergraduates in the humanities or social sciences to use in Korea for research and/or field work relating to a senior honors thesis in an area of Korean studies. Ordinarily, the award covers the cost of travel and research related expenses for the research project. Undergraduate applicants must have at least two years of Korean language training or equivalent proficiency in the language. In the case of exceptionally strong projects, more limited language background may be considered.

GRADUATE STUDENTS IN RESIDENCE

Recognizing the importance of graduate students as part of the research community, the Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences approved the use of space in CGIS for doctoral students completing their dissertation, or for graduate students providing direct research assistance to a faculty resident. This is an opportunity for graduate students to be more fully integrated into the Korean studies research community and to interact with visiting scholars, faculty, and peers in East Asian studies.

NEWS

The Korea Institute is pleased to announce three generous new gifts in AY 2018 – 2019:

The Youngja Kim Fund in Support of the Korea Institute

The generous gift from Youngja Kim establishes the endowed Youngja Kim Fund in Support of the Korea Institute. The Fund will be used to provide support to the Korea Institute. Activities the Fund may support include, but are not limited to, research, students, and related activities of the Korea Institute in its mission to promote the study of Korea.

The Eun-Kyung and Tom Kang Korea Institute Fund

The generous gift pledged from Thomas C-S Kang, AB 1984, and Eun-Kyung Hong Kang establishes the endowed Eun-Kyung and Tom Kang Korea Institute Fund. The primary purpose of the Fund is to support student activities at the Harvard University Korea Institute. Activities the fund may support include, but are not limited to, student research, conferences and language grants, dissertation fellowships, scholarships, and administrative costs.

The Korea Herald-Korea Foundation Grant

The Korea Herald contributes the grant to the Korea Institute for the period 2018 – 2023 through the Korea Foundation Designated Donation Program in order to enhance knowledge and understanding of Korea, primarily for students in the Korea Institute summer internship program and Harvard Summer School.
Thank You

SUPPORTING THE KOREA INSTITUTE AT HARVARD UNIVERSITY

THE KOREA INSTITUTE RELIES ON GIFTS AND GRANTS to support its teaching, research, publishing, and educational and outreach goals. The need for these commitments increases as Korea plays an increasingly important global role.

BUILDING FOR THE FUTURE

The Korea Institute could not carry out its activities – educating students and the public, engaging with established and emerging scholars, and building ties with Korea – without vital financial support from its friends and partners. Recent funding has allowed the Institute to sustain valuable programs and to develop exciting new ventures, ranging from the Early Korea Project to Korean film and art activities to a new post-doc opportunity.

The Korea Institute offers opportunities to support developing research, to advance existing projects, and to launch innovative new programs. The Institute encourages individuals and organizations to support its important scholarly mission. Our donors help to underwrite vital activities and programs such as:

- Faculty research and teaching
- Graduate student research and teaching
- Undergraduate programs
- Fellowships and scholarships
- Publications
- Seminars, lectures, workshops, and conferences
- New program development

Fulfilling the Korea Institute’s mission to promote a deeper understanding of Korea would not be possible without its valued friends and supporters.

EVERY GIFT MAKES A DIFFERENCE

To support the Korea Institute, please contact Susan Laurence, executive director, at 617-384-7388 or Susan_Laurence@harvard.edu. Your contribution of any amount will help the Institute fulfill a pivotal role in shaping and expanding the Korean studies program at Harvard and beyond.
