DIRECTOR'S LETTER

“The beginning is half of the whole”— this is a popular Korean saying. Indeed, when I became director of the Korea Institute in 2011, filling the shoes of my predecessors Professors Carter Eckert and David McCann seemed implausible. But with their immeasurable encouragement, aided by steady and generous support from the Institute’s friends and devoted staff, I completed my first term.

My vision as director was to nurture existing core programs and develop new areas of teaching and research on Korea. Adding more faculty members has been a priority, and I am very proud that the number of core Korea-specialist faculty has increased with the arrival of Professor Paul Y. Chang in the Department of Sociology last year. We also welcome Professor Si Nae Park in the Department of East Asian Languages and Civilizations, teaching Korean Literature.

The past three years included historic and notable events, including the Institute’s thirtieth anniversary, Harvard President Drew Faust’s first visit to Korea, Professor McCann’s retirement events, a lecture by Korean performer and entertainer Psy, art exhibits, and others. New programs were implemented such as the Soon Young Kim postdoctoral fellowship, Leadership Forum, and Religious Identities in Asia seminar series with Harvard’s Center for the Study of World Religions and Asia Center. All the while, the Institute continued to organize and host academic conferences and workshops at Harvard and abroad, while expanding our flagship seminars, the Korea Colloquium and Kim Koo Forum. The Institute has also continued to support scholarly publications including Azalea: A Journal of Korean Literature and Culture and the Harvard Asia Center Publications Program. The Early Korea Project at the Korea Institute has been consistently producing high quality scholarship through its publications, despite funding challenges.

The Institute has had a supportive role in offering new Korean Studies courses and improving and promoting existing courses. Over the years, Kim Koo Visiting Professors have taught new courses in the Departments of Government, Visual and Environmental Studies, and this year in EALC. Korea Institute postdoctoral fellows and visiting scholars have offered unique courses in the Departments of Anthropology, EALC, and History of Art and Architecture. The Institute has also supported teaching by core Korea faculty, such as the Two Koreas course taught by Professor Carter Eckert, which is popular with undergraduates. Our research, study, and work abroad programs for undergraduate and graduate students — fellowships and grants for research and travel, Harvard Summer School-Korea Program, internships, and others — have been gradually expanding, enabling ever more students to experience Korea through study, research and work. The HSS-Korea program will be celebrating its 10th anniversary this coming summer.

Through many and varied activities in fulfillment of its mission, the Institute has made contributions to create, expand, and deepen knowledge and understanding of Korea. Over the years, we have nurtured close working relationships with other units, constituencies, and leadership at Harvard and promoted a broader network of collaboration with Korean Studies centers and programs worldwide. At the heart of it all, there are people — faculty members, colleagues and scholars at Harvard and beyond, students, staff, visitors — and the generosity of donors and supporters. It continues to be our shared vision and aspiration for the Korea Institute to make a positive impact on academic and scholarly pursuits. “Stagnant water is bound to rot,” another Korean saying goes. Flexibility and resilience in meeting new challenges are necessary as we are living in a fast moving world. It is my vision and hope that the water of the Korea Institute will continuously flow, churn, and swell, as it has for last four decades, as we promote the study, teaching, and research of Korea in today’s world and in the years to come.

ABOUT THE KOREA INSTITUTE

MISSION AND HISTORY

The Korea Institute was established in 1981 under the aegis of the Fairbank Center for East Asian Research, and in 1993 it became an autonomous institution directly responsible to the Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences. It is the only organization devoted solely to the support and development of Korean Studies at Harvard, as the central hub for Harvard faculty, students, leading scholars in the field, and visitors to join together as a community for the study of Korea.

The Korea Institute is an integral and dynamic part of the intellectual life at Harvard. In addition to the Korea Colloquium, the Institute also supports lectures, workshops, conferences, and other scholarly exchanges throughout the year. The Institute hosts visiting scholars, fellows and associates through an affiliated scholars program. Other activities include faculty research projects, undergraduate and graduate student support, teaching, study and work in Korea programs, publications, Korean film screenings, and some cultural events. The Institute has also established a network of relationships with other centers and departments throughout the University and with colleagues and institutions throughout North America, Europe, and Asia.

NEW FACULTY IN KOREAN STUDIES

The Department of East Asian Languages and Civilizations and the Korea Institute at Harvard are delighted to announce that Si Nae Park will be joining the faculty as Assistant Professor of East Asian Languages and Civilizations. Si Nae Park received her Ph.D in Asian Studies at the University of British Columbia, Canada, specializing in premodern Korean literature. Interested in Korean literature and literary practices as part of the larger context of the Sinographic cultural realm, her current research project uses vernacular writing as a key concept to delve into questions of genre and their intersections with the historiography of Korean literature and the rise of late-Chosŏn yadam narratives ('unofficial talk'; short narratives of historical persons and events). This project is currently being formulated into a book manuscript tentatively titled Staged Voices in Tongp'ae naksong.

SEMINARS & LECTURE SERIES

KOREA COLLOQUIUM

The Korea Colloquium is the KI's flagship seminar series on Korea-related topics, which has gathered scholars in a variety of fields from far and wide on Thursday afternoons for over a decade. Co-sponsorship by other Harvard centers and departments is welcome. These collaborations broaden perspectives on Korea and the United States, Asia, and Latin America, for example, and enrich our understanding of the scope of Korea studies, while strengthening ties with colleagues in other regions. The Korea Colloquium is funded by the Young-Chul Min Memorial Fund at the Korea Institute, Harvard University, and the U.S. Department of Education Title VI Grant.

The Korea Colloquium seminar series takes place on Thursdays at the Porté Seminar Room (S250) or Thomas Chan-Soo Kang Room (S050) in CGIS South Building, 1730 Cambridge Street.

KIM KOO FORUM ON KOREA CURRENT AFFAIRS

The Kim Koo Forum on Korea Current Affairs was established in academic year 2004-2005 with the generous support of the Kim Koo Foundation, and aims to supplement and enhance Harvard's existing Korean studies program by inviting experts in both academic and policy circles in the fields of diplomacy, security, cultural relations, and human rights to address some of the pressing issues facing the U.S. and the two Koreas today. The Kim Koo Forum on Korea Current Affairs frequently collaborates with other schools, departments and centers across Harvard to bring speakers on a wide range of current affairs topics related to Korea.

The Kim Koo Forum on Korea Current Affairs seminar series takes place on Thursdays at the Thomas Chan- Soo Kang Room (S050) in CGIS South Building, 1730 Cambridge Street.

PROGRAMS FOR GRADUATE STUDENTS

The Korea Institute supports graduate students in Harvard's Graduate School of Arts and Sciences (GSAS) whose research involves Korea. The KI recognizes that graduate students have different funding needs for the different stages of their research and writing. The KI places great emphasis on supporting graduate students in the study of Korea, and seeks to cultivate the upcoming generations of Korea scholars.

Undergraduate and graduate student awards are generously supported by the Young-Chul Min Memorial, Sunshik Min Endowment for the Advancement of Korean Literature, Sanhak, Kim& Kang, Pagoda, and the LG Yonam Funds at the Korea Institute, Harvard University and anonymous donors. Some students are also supported by the Asia Center William H. Overholt Fund.

KOREA INSTITUTE GRADUATE CONFERENCE ATTENDANCE GRANTS

The Korea Institute provides small grants for Harvard graduate students in any field of Korean studies in the humanities or social sciences to help defray costs incurred to attend scholarly conferences where they present papers or serve as panel discussants.

John Lee, EALC, Association of Asian Studies Conference, Philadelphia, PA

TRAVEL GRANTS

The Korea Institute offers a limited number of travel grants for summer research and/or fieldwork in Korea for graduate students. Proposals from graduate students must relate to their doctoral or masters theses, and priority is given to doctoral candidates. Graduate degree candidates in all social sciences or humanities fields with at least three years of Korean language training or equivalent proficiency are eligible.

SUMMER LANGUAGE STUDY GRANTS FOR GRADUATE STUDENTS

The Korea Institute offers graduate summer language study grants to A.M. students and Harvard doctoral candidates in the humanities or social sciences for summer language study that is directly related to a thesis/Ph.D. dissertation in Korean studies. Study should take place at accredited programs outside of the United States. Priority is given to advanced study in a primary language, to the study of a secondary language that is necessary for the completion of the degree, or to the study of a secondary language that is necessary for advanced research.

ICF GRADUATE STUDENT FELLOWSHIP IN KOREAN LITERATURE

The ICF Fellowship was created to support Harvard graduate students whose research focuses on translations of Korean literature, and who are no longer eligible to receive funding from GSAS financial aid, in order to free the students from teaching during the fellowship period so that they may focus on their work. Funding is provided by the International Communications Foundation (ICF) of Seoul, Korea; the fellowship program is housed and administered by the Korea Institute at Harvard University. Proposals from Harvard doctoral students entering their third or fourth year of study are welcome. Priority is given to students most strongly committed to Korean literature translation projects, and who have some prior experience in translating Korean literature.

GRADUATE STUDENTS IN RESIDENCE

Recognizing the importance of graduate students as part of the research community, the Dean of FAS approved the use of space in CGIS for doctoral students completing their dissertation, or for graduate students providing direct research assistance to a faculty resident. This is an opportunity for graduate students to be more fully integrated into the Korean studies research community and to interact with our visiting scholars, faculty, and peers in East Asian studies.

PEOPLE AT THE KOREA INSTITUTE

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The KI Director is appointed by the Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences (FAS). Membership recommendations for the Executive Committee are submitted to the Dean for approval. The Executive Committee is composed of tenured professors and junior faculty. The committee meets monthly; its members fully participate in KI activities and oversee policies and procedures.

Sun Joo Kim, Harvard-Yenching Professor of Korean History
 Paul Y. Chang, Assistant Professor of Sociology
 Carter J. Eckert, Yoon Se Young Professor of Korean History
 Nicholas Harkness, Assistant Professor of Anthropology (on leave AY 2013-2014)
 David R. McCann, Korea Foundation Professor of Korean Literature (on leave Spring 2014)

After many years of dedicated service, David R. McCann has retired from Harvard at the end of AY 2013-2014. The Korea Institute extends warm congratulations and gratitude for his dedicated work, and wishes him the best in all his endeavors.

STAFF

Responsibility for administering the Korea Institute on a day-to-day basis was assumed during AY 2013-2014 by a small but exceptionally dedicated and capable staff.

Susan Laurence, Executive Director
 Myong-suk Chandra, Institute Coordinator
 Catherine Glover, Program Coordinator, Korea Institute and Reischauer Institute of Japanese Studies
 Jina Kim, Outreach and Events Manager
 Jessica Gaddis, Staff Assistant (January – May 2014)
 Susan McHone, Director of Finance and Administration (shared with the Asia Center, Fairbank Center, South Asia Initiative and Harvard China Fund)
 Sarah Gordon, Director of Finance and Administration (shared with the Asia Center, Fairbank Center, South Asia Initiative and Harvard China Fund) (as of May 5)
 Kathryn Maldonis, Financial Associate (shared with the Asia Center)
 Robin Provost, Financial Associate (shared with the Asia Center)

After many years of dedicated service, Myong-suk Chandra and Susan McHone have retired from Harvard at the end of AY 2013-2014. The Korea Institute extends warm congratulations and gratitude for their dedicated work, and wishes them the best in all their endeavors.

AFFILIATED SCHOLARS 2013 – 2014

Affiliated scholars contribute to the academic diversity of the Institute. They are sponsored by a Harvard faculty member and benefit from collaborating and contributing to research interests; they interact with students and serve as valuable contacts for Harvard students conducting research abroad; they actively participate in KI activities and attend and sometimes teach Harvard classes. They broaden intellectual exchanges and infuse the community with their unique perspectives. Affiliation applications are reviewed by the Executive Committee, and the Korea Institute accepts a limited number of affiliated scholars each year. The period of affiliation is in most cases one academic year.

Visiting Scholars

Visiting Scholar appointments allow full-time professors on leave from their permanent positions at other universities to carry out a research project in association with Harvard faculty.

SUPPORTING THE KOREA INSTITUTE AT HARVARD UNIVERSITY

THE KOREA INSTITUTE RELIES ON GIFTS AND GRANTS to support its teaching, research, publishing, and educational and outreach goals. The need for these commitments increases as the Korea plays an increasingly important global role.

BUILDING FOR THE FUTURE

The Korea Institute could not carry out its activities — educating students and the public, engaging with established and emerging scholars, and building ties with Korea — without vital financial support from its friends and partners. Recent funding has allowed the Institute to sustain valuable programs and to develop exciting new ventures, ranging from the Early Korea Project to Korean film and art activities to a new post-doc opportunity.

The Korea Institute offers giving opportunities to support developing research, to advance existing projects, and to launch innovative new programs. The Institute encourages individuals and organizations to support its important scholarly mission. Our donors help to underwrite vital activities and programs such as:

- Faculty research and teaching
- Graduate student research and teaching
- Undergraduate programs
- Fellowships and scholarships
- Publications
- Seminars, lectures, workshops, and conferences
- New program development

Fulfilling the Korea Institute's mission to promote a deeper understanding of Korea would not be possible without its valued friends and supporters.

EVERY GIFT MAKES A DIFFERENCE

To support the Korea Institute, please contact Susan Laurence, executive director, at 617-384-7388 or Susan_Laurence@harvard.edu. Your contribution of any amount will help the Institute fulfill a pivotal role in shaping and expanding the Korean Studies program at Harvard and beyond.
